Listening A [Track 04]

Ken: Hanna! Is that you? Don't you remember me? It's me, Ken!

Hanna: Ken! Wow! I didn't recognize you. Long time no see!

Ken: You're right. How long has it been? Three, four years – maybe more?

Hanna: Actually, it's been five years! Remember? We used to hang out at the library with other college friends. I haven't seen you since graduation.

Ken: You're right! Time has really flown since we finished school.

Hanna: Look at you! You look fantastic. Something's very different. Hmm, is it the suit, maybe? You didn't use to wear suits. No, that's not it. It's something . . . yes, it's something about your face.

Ken: Yep. I used to wear glasses, remember? Big black ones that were kind of old-fashioned. I started wearing contact lenses right after college. You know, I think that helped me at job interviews. The contact lenses make me feel more confident. And I can see better, too.

Hanna: Well, you look great. I remember you in those old-fashioned glasses and your funny T-shirts, but you have a very different look now – fashionable, but not flashy. It's a look that says, "I'm confident, I like myself, and I'm good at my job."

Ken: Aw . . . now you're embarrassing me.

Hanna: No, really. I mean it. You look great, but you also look like you're doing great. I'm really happy for you.
